

I am opposed to the use of cell phones aboard airborne aircraft. I am concerned that there could be a safety risk due to interference with navigational equipment and aircraft communications. I believe that use of cell phones during an emergency could cause the cell phone users to be distracted and miss important instructions from the crew which could jeopardize the safety of all passengers. I think it could also lead to disputes among passengers if some take exception to the constant cell phone conversations of those sitting around them. I also don't want to be stuck between people who are talking on their cell phones for the entire flight.
